Police Find House in Central Valley, L. I., Where He Plotted Reign of Terror.

Frank Holt, who on Saturday tried to murder J. Pierpont Morgan in his home at Glen Cove, committed suicide in the Nassau County jail in Mineola at 10:25 o'clock last night. According to the prison authorities, Holt killed himself by diving head first from his cell to the floor. An earlier report, based on the statements of Keeper O'Ryan, asserted that the prisoner blew the top of his head off with a fulminat-

District Attorney Lewis J. Smith and Jail Physician Cleghorn proved to their own satisfaction that he had dived from the grill outside of his cell, and that there was no foundation for the theory that Holt had placed an explosive in his mouth before leaping

Dr. Cleghorn explained this re port by saying that the sound as of an explosion heard by Deputy Sheriff Jeremish O'Ryan, Holt's keeper, was probably caused by the prisoner's head striking a loose
